Spotlight on co-production series

Over the coming weeks Wiltshire Centre for Independent Living will be showcasing various examples of co-production that have taken place in Wiltshire.

Co-production refers to a way of working, whereby everybody comes together to create positive change. Disabled people are credited as experts and assets, they are local change makers who are able to influence, design and develop how their local community and everything in it works for them.

This week we are highlighting a group of disabled people who have been sharing their experiences and ideas about how supermarkets could be more inclusive for them.
